

<http://whistleblower.ml-implode.com/?p=189#comments>

Dear do the Math: It looks like we agree to disagree since I don't believe a 1 in 5 ratio is enough reason to eliminate the program entirely. For all the testimonials provided in support of the program, who can say outright that they lost their home as a direct result of DPA? And to address the millions of dollars earned in the non-profit business, I think that many churches, hospitals and advocacy programs etc earn way more revenue than DPA's, but their legitimacy is never called into question. Finally, inflated appraisals are addressed in HR 600, since it calls for DPA reform. Have you read the bill? I do respect your opinion, but the people who read this thread deserve to know the truth of what is being presented to them, not hearsay. I represent the 94%, who will represent the 1 from the 1 in 5 to ban the program for millions of underserved homebuyers?

By Psue on Feb 3, 2009